Hospital integration would not disrupt services for HHHS, CEO says

CHAD INGRAM

Staff Reporter

A merger of the Peterborough Regional Health Centre and Lindsay's Ross Memorial Hospital, integrating the two into one hospital network with two sites, would not disrupt the services that Haliburton Highlands Health Services receives from those hospitals, HHHS CEO Carolyn Plummer says.

The boards of PRHC and RMH have submitted a joint directional plan to the board of directors for the Central East Ontario LHIN (Local Health Integration Network), according to a press release from RMH, indicating their mutual intention to integrate the two hospitals into one, while maintaining separate sites.

"A final decision has not been made, and the proposed integration is subject to ongoing due diligence, stakeholder engagement and approvals by the boards of both RMH and PRHC; by the board of directors of the Central East LHIN; and by the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care," the release reads. "The two hospitals have been working together for many

Youth Hub begins community engagement process, sets sights on future fundraising

The wheels are already in motion as plans for Point in Time's new Youth Hub began to take shape last week.

The project, which is in partnership with Haliburton Highlands Health Services and Fleming College, will have key input from area youth, with the first of many meetings that occurred July 3.

Feedback from last week's meeting is still being wrapped up, however organizers were pleased with the input of youth who attended, said Marg Cox, executive director of Point in Time.

"It was a focus group style and this one was for any youth who wanted to attend between the ages of 12 and 25, which is the age group that the youth hub will be serving," said Lindsay Kerkhof of Point in Time. "We asked a few questions, some of which have been asked before, but some new ones around how to integrate services and what they want it to look like."

Dysart fire chief Mike lles secures the sign for the fire ban in Haliburton, which was declared effective immediately on Monday, July 9 for the entire county. Dry conditions, high heat, and the lack of forecasted precipitation has led to an extreme fire risk. All permits are cancelled, all open fires and campfires are prohibited during the fire ban. The total fire ban encompasses the entire area of Haliburton County (Municipality of Dysart et al, Township of Minden Hills, Township of Algonquin Highlands and Township of Highlands East). /DARREN

The meeting was held in the new hub, which will be located at the former Lighthouse Pentecostal Church on Organizers said a dozen youth came out to attend the meeting.

"There was a lot of input, all of our questions got answered," said Kerkhof.

Cox said the plan is for the organization to take possession of the building at the end of this month.

"Part of what we're trying to do is gather input from a variety of sources," she said. "It's a bit of a work in progress.

Earlier this year funding totalling more than $1 million was announced for the hub, with support coming from the Haliburton County Development Corporation and Youth Wellness Hubs Ontario.

The majority of funding will go towards covering operating expenses, said Cox.

"We're still finalizing the budget with CAMH," she Cox said they are anxious to open the doors as soon as possible for the youth, and are considering a week long soft opening, so that youth "can really get to own the space."

"The youth voice is so important and we're really this a space that's planned by youth for youth," she said.

The timeline for construction will be dependent on permits and contractor's availability.

There has been wide community support for the pro-

"We're thrilled with the level of community and youth engagement," she said. "And that the community is so supportive. We couldn't be happier."

Organizers are planning to receive input from parents and family members of area youth on Tuesday, July 17 from 5:30 to 7:30 at 12 Dysart Ave.

Moving forward, organizers are anticipating fundraising efforts to begin for the project, which will be spearheaded by youth.

Updates on the project will be available on Point in Time's website and Facebook page, as well as by calling their office at 705-457-5345.

Jewelry stolen, items scattered at Lily Ann

SUE TIFFIN

Judy MacDuff knew something was amiss when she opened the door to the 4Cs Lily Ann Thrift Shop last Tuesday morning.

"Oh, I thought, something is not right," she said. "Things were just scattered."

MacDuff estimates that a break-in occurred between 10:30 p.m. on July 2, and 7:45 a.m. July 3 when she opened the York Street shop.

"They broke a window at the back," she said. "They didn't take much, there was jewelry in the jewelry case, which isn't worth anything, that was taken.

MacDuff called Haliburton Highlands OPP, who she said took blood samples from the broken window. Besides blood on items throughout the shop, there was also urine on some of the clothing, which had to be thrown out, shoes knocked off the rack, items thrown out a window and a mess that required the shop to be closed all day so that volunteers could help put it back

"It was more of a mess than them getting much," said MacDuff. "Nobody knew where to start. Everybody was just so upset. They knew we had to start somewhere. It's upsetting because you feel violated. Big messes are harder to clean. I think they make you feel worse, seeing that someone's just tore everything apart."

The same Lily Ann building had been broken in before, since its move in 2005 from its previous location, which had also been broken into. There is no money in the store, as it is deposited every night.

'[I] just [feel] kind of disgusted in a way," said MacDuff. "We try so hard to help people. If they really needed something, if they had come to ask, we would have looked after them."

Haliburton Highlands OPP reported a separate break and enter at The Dock Spot, a business located on Hwy 118 in Highlands East, was reported just a minute before the Lily Ann break-in on July 3. In that incident, unknown person(s) accessed a trailer located on the property and stole a large quantity of cash sometime between June 30 and July 3.

Anyone with information regarding either incident should contact the Ontario Provincial Police at 1-888-310-1122, or to remain anonymous, contact Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS) or leave an anonymous online message at www.khcs.ca, where you may be eligible to receive a cash reward of up to $2000.

Avoid 6 Costly Errors When Moving to a Larger Haliburton Highlands Home and Save Thousands

Haliburton - A new report has just been released which identifies the 6 most common and costly mistakes that homebuyers make when moving to a larger home.

Unlike the experience of buying a first home, when you're looking to move-up, and already own a home, there are certain factors that can complicate the situation. It's very important for you to understand these issues before you list your home for sale.

Not only is there the issue of financing to consider, but you also have to sell your present home at exactly the right time in order to avoid either the financial burden of owning two homes or, just as bad, the dilemma of having no place to live during the gap between years to jointly deliver excellent care for the region's patients. Partnerships and collaborations between the two organizations already exist in such areas as diagnostic imaging, lab medicine, dialysis services, mental health, obstetrics and pediatrics, ophthalmology and orthopaedics."

HHHS also has agreements with each of the hospitals for a variety of services, but Plummer told the paper that if the integration proceeds, the delivery of those services would not be interrupted.

"We do have a strategic alliance agreement with the Ross Memorial for several services and resources, such as IT and diagnostic imaging, for example," Plummer wrote in an email to the paper. "We also have an agreement with the Peterborough Regional Health Centre for some of our laboratory services. At HHHS we have a strong, collaborative working relationship with both hospitals, which allows us to improve access to services for Haliburton County that we would not be able to do on our own. Regardless of the outcome of their discussions, the agreements we have with them will be upheld - meaning there will no interruption in any of the services we share or receive from either hospital. Although there may be some process changes that take place, the services will

There will be a series of public meetings dealing with the proposed integration, and an online survey is to be launched in July.

Wescali rocks Lee's Palace

Wescali, the 2018 Battle of the Bands winner and a local group, left the county on June 2 to play at famed music venue Lee's Palace in Toronto. "It was incredible and definitely an experience we'll never forget," they said in a statement to the Echo. "So many incredible bands have played there and it was so cool to be on the same stage. Just standing on the stage during set up was an amazing feeling because of how many of our idols have stood on the stage." Wescali also just played at the Haliburton Junction Skate Park grand opening, at Haliboo Musicfest/World Soap Hockey Championships on July 7 and will play Haliburton Ribfest on Aug. 25./SUBMITTED PHOTO

Highlands East septic inspections continue

ANGELICA INGRAM

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the July 4 regular meeting of Highlands East council.

Chief building official Laurie Devolin gave council an update on the septic maintenance program currently underway in the municipality.

"Letters have been sent out to property owners describing the level of compliance of their septic systems and asking for a response from any that were above the low risk category," she wrote in a report to council.

Devolin said that while she has received many responses, in some cases second and third letters have been sent out.

To date our department has sent out 126 letters in regards to properties being inspected during the 2017 season. Of these, 78 have responded to us, with 19 being completed so far. Some of our respondents are in the process of obtaining the necessary permits and installing new septic systems. Some have just opened their cottages or are planning to do so in July so I am hopeful that our compliance number will increase over the summer," she stated in her report.

Devolin told council that in some cases she may have to issue orders.

"I do have a couple of systems right now that may require me to issue orders, because they are unsafe." Devolin said she's willing to work with residents to come up with a solution.

"I'm trying to be flexible with people . we do need these things corrected but I understand there are limited resources and I can't make somebody do something if they don't have the money to do it."

Council votes to increase wage to offset tax exemption changes

Following in the footsteps of county councillors, Highlands East council has voted in favour of increasing their wages to make up the difference from new tax

As of Jan. 1, 2019, councillors will no longer have a one-third tax free allowance on their remuneration.

"On June 6, 2018, council received an information report regarding the elimination of the one-third tax allowance for elected members of council. Staff was directed to bring back options for council's consideration. Remuneration for council members are only twothirds taxed. Each year the municipality increases council salaries by the negotiated annual increase of the local union. The 2017 increase was 1.75 per cent," wrote chief administrative officer / treasurer Shannon Hunter in a report to coun-

In response to the tax changes, Hunter presented three options to council, the first being no change to remuneration, the second being no change however additional expenses could be claimed by council members, and the third option being an increase to wages to ensure their net pay remains the same.

The second option could result in a more costly option to the municipality than the third option, wrote Hunter in her

The third option had an expected annual budget increase of $3,829 for the

"The exact impact on each councillor's net pay would depend on their specific circumstances," wrote Hunter.

Councillor Cec Ryall said he was not comfortable with councillors giving themselves a raise.

Councillor Joan Barton said she spends way more than the current tax exemption allows and thinks the third option is more than fair.

"I don't think you should be penalized," said Barton.

Councillors, with the exception of Ryall, voted in favour of the third option.

Changes coming to building

office in Gooderham

Renovations will be happening at the Highlands East building department, to accommodate the vacancy left by the space formerly belonging to the Gooderham post office.

The hope is that phase 1 of the renovation can begin after Labour Day. The project is estimated to cost a total of $25,000.

"The work generally consists of removal and replacement of interior finishes, construction of new office space, expansion of a public washroom for accessibility, and the creation of a public Wi-Fi Lounge," wrote Devolin in her report to council.

Lloyd Watson Centre to cool off

Air conditioning will soon be coming to the Lloyd Watson Centre, with installation expected at the end of this month.

Property supervisor Jim Alden reported that three air conditioning units for the LWC will be installed by the end of July.

Making connections

NE OF THE great strengths of the Haliburton area is the ebb and flow of people. Not just those who savour their weekends away from the city, but the retirees, the students and new entrepreneurs who choose to make the Highlands home – full- or part time.

Rural Ontario in general is losing its population base, with significant numbers of young people choosing to make their lives in the cities, but there is also an inflow which is becoming more important as years go on and we see it here in Haliburton County.

This community has a glue that not only keeps people together, but brings new people into the fold. Visitors come up to the Wolf Centre and see that forsale sign on their way down Kennisis Lake Road. They take a summer class at the college and realize they can't miss the annual studio tour. They start to dream about working here, living here or retiring here.

Their increased presence builds on the vitality and diversity of the Highlands. They join clubs and donate to important causes. They buy real estate and pay taxes. Some relocate their businesses and add options to our main streets.

But sometimes there are road-

According to a recent study by the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations, waterfront property owners in eastern Ontario see three main obstacles to working from their second homes: lack of internet/cell access, fewer municipal services, and lack of economic development assistance or professional organizations.

The last two points can be addressed on a local level through continued investment and outreach, but improving cell service is a much bigger ask. One quarter of the area with businesses, homes and major roadways in eastern Ontario cannot access cellular ser-

Haliburton County is part of a $213-million proposal by the Eastern Ontario Regional Network to expand cell service and it's two-thirds of the way there. The new Ontario PC government has committed to follow through with the previous government's $71 million investment in the project and local municipalities have already signed up for their third. Which leaves the federal government.

In June, EORN announced that MPs from all of the ridings in the region, no matter their political affiliation, have sent letters of support to the government for the project. The letter signed by local MP Jamie Schmale stated an estimated 3,000 jobs would be created with improved cell service.

With this final investment, our area could become much more appealing to those already thinking of staying here more often or permanently.

Giving residents the ability to come and go as they please, rather than based on where they can get cell reception would certainly encourage economic growth and could only enhance what is already an incredible place.

Lowering ears

T HAD BEEN years since she had looked at these. But the day was so Lblisteringly hot Hannah decided to stay indoors and organize her old photo albums.

Three tanned faces now peered out at her. Lined up on a pull-out couch, they smiled at the camera, enjoying this moment before bedtime. And as she looked at the photo, Hannah remembered so much more than what the picture showed.

She remembered the feel of those summer pajamas, thin cotton so light and airy they never seemed to bother a sunburn. Pink and grey, sleeveless and almost legless, they were perfect under a light sheet as the owls called from outside her bedroom window.

The summer of this photo was an especially hot one as well. So she and her brothers practically lived outdoors for two months. Their skin turned nut brown while their young limbs seemed to grow extra muscles from the climbing, running and swimming, swimming, swimming. In fact their father joked they'd all grow gills if they spent much more time in the water.

They had just changed from bath suits when the photo was snapped and their hair was still slicked back from the water. Hannah could have been taken for one of her brothers that summer. She sported what her mom called a summer cut, probably no strand more than an inch long. Except for the pajamas, her name could have been Mark or Sam.

After a bedtime swim, they always enjoyed buttermilk and either a donut or fresh slice of buttered and jammed bread. These were bought from a small store out on the highway where her parents picked up the Toronto Star and milk each evening. The donuts were long before Tim Hortons' time and Hannah remembered them as freshly soft and sweet. And the bread was just as tasty, spongy white with a rich flavour she never tasted in bread these days. Was it the flour? Maybe the butter and homemade strawberry jam played a part. When washed down with a glass of buttermilk, it was the perfect tonic for sending active young bodies to dream-

Hannah slowly turned the pages in the photo album. There they were again, posing on the dock with the lake spreading out behind them like it went on forever. Mark was showing off a bullfrog and Sam had one flipper on his foot. Hannah smiled, remembering how Sam always seemed to lose things – a flipper, his bait bucket, a favourite comic.

Now she returned to that first photo of them sitting on her parents' old couch and looked more closely at her younger self. The hair cut. She remembered going with her mother the day after school let out. The hair salon sat on the corner across from the library and in the window were pictures of glamorous women with fancy hairstyles. Inside was a row of shiny metal hair dryers and everyone wearing pink smocks.

Sitting up high in the chair she had watched with some trepidation as so many of her hair clippings fell to the floor. But when it was done, she was very pleased. Her neck felt cool and when she rubbed her hand over her head it felt like another person's. She was no longer Hannah; she was someone else. A mystery person. However when her father arrived home from work that evening, he still recognized her. "I see you got your ears lowered today Hannah," he had said. At first she didn't understand what he meant but when she checked the bathroom mirror, then she knew.

Her brothers had always got a buzz cut in the summer but this was the first time she had been altered for the season. No more tangled tats or braids stuck in elastic bands. No more mosquitoes or deer flies trying to find their way out of her curls. Now she was a smooth seal, skimming though the water to emerge and shake her head almost dry. It was a new experience.

And these memories got her to thinking. Reaching up to her neck, sticky and warm from the heat, she wondered if it was again time to get her ears lowered. After only a moment's hesitation, she picked up her phone to make an appointment.

Time to connect

THE OTHER DAY Jenn and I lived through a horrifying incident in which we both realized we were 26 minutes from home and neither of us was carrying a cell phone. Luckily, we lived to tell the tale. Now, as a public service, I will write about our time of horrific isolation and how we coped. Perhaps this could help should, God forbid, it happen to you.

Cell minus 26

Jenn: Hey, have you noticed that we haven't had a Tweet, Instagram post, Snapchat, e-mail, news alert, Facebook post, voice mail, phone call or text message in the last half hour?

Steve: You forgot, offers of riches from a deposed Nigerian princess. I usually get those every ten minutes.

Steve: Yikes. Well, don't panic. I've got mine in my.... Oh crap. (Steve does an immediate U-turn towards home.)

Jenn: (Begins hyperventilating.) Hurry, please. Steve: Relax. We can survive this.

Jenn: (Grabs Steve by the shirt collar and shakes him hard.) How?

Steve: Calm down. I once lived in a time where no one carried cell phones!

pic of the past

This pic of the past was sent in by John Jamieson of the Highland Grove Museum. He writes: "First Nation Algonquins have a long musical tradition, encompassing Elephant Lake and Baptiste Lake. The Baptiste Band travelled between small groups, often performing at the Orange Lodge in Highland Grove."

Wisps

Wisps of willows tickling the River, as it trickles past, flowing through this cathedral of trees, their branches cradling the light raining down from Sky.

I sit on the riverbank, still as a tree stump, staring into the Air where a willow's limb arched over the bridge, where children used to swing from a rope and splash into the River below.

How hollow, the Air feels to me, without the shrieks of children drenching it, how quiet the bridge, without their feet greeting the wooden planks, splattering the Air with their glee. My eyes sweep through the other trees, grazing the burls bulging from their twisted trunks, some of them, stooped, others, missing limbs, yet still they stand, still they grow, nourished by light and the River's flow. I wonder whether they feel the absence of their kin, the gap in the Air where it used to sway, before Wind massacred it, before a steel blade severed it from the earth, that bears the scar of remembering when the willow was just a seed, squirming in the darkness, waiting to sprout.

I wonder whether the other willows quivered or wept, when they felt the blade slice through the whether the River curled into itself beneath the bridge, slowing its flow.

I wonder how the hands that carried the chunks of willow, felt, whether they used to grip the rope and splash into the River when they were small. Whether it mattered at all, that a space was being carved in the Air, never to be stroked by the fingers of the willow ever again.

I wonder what memory the River will hold of the tree, where its limbs arched over it, staining its skin the colour of shade, when Sunlight seeped into its flow. I rise from the tree stump, finger the green tendrils sprouting from the wondering whether somewhere, through a splinter or a crack, something new is pushing its way through the dark.

Ownership structure changes for McKecks restaurant

ANGELICA INGRAM

Staff Reporter

The reins of power at McKecks have shifted as head chef Aaron Walker and his wife Melissa have now become the majority shareholders of the main street restaurant.

The change has been in the works for years, and was a "natural evolution" for the restaurant, said Aaron.

Aaron and his wife have purchased shares that formerly belonged to owner Maarten Steinkamp and his wife Laura.

"This has been in development for many

"This has been in development for many years, we just had to wait for the timing to be right for both Maarten and Laura and myself," said Aaron. "We took our time to make sure we executed it very carefully."

The change now sees the Walkers at the helm of the restaurant, along with general manager Karen Frybort, who has been a mainstay at McKecks for the past 25 years.

"The three of us [Walker, Melissa and Frybort] were the management team of McKecks and Maarten and Laura's focus had been on other ventures that they had going on," said Aaron.

Aaron has been involved with McKecks for the past five years as a chef and partner. He is excited about the changes ahead and is looking to build on the great food and service at the restaurant.

"That's a work in progress that never ends," he said. "We want to stay involved with the community, both charitably and in spirit. Although we honour the tradition and roots of McKecks we're always looking to innovate and come up with new ideas."

Some new avenues the restaurant has pursued is catering for events, such as weddings and the recent Haliburton Rotary Lobsterfest, to having a presence at the local farmers' market. Aaron said the business has been very busy and is in a period of growth. He said he is excited about what the future holds.

"I want to thank everyone in the community that has supported McKecks over the many years under different ownerships ... both Walt McKechnie and Laura and Maarten for building it to what it is today," said Aaron.

Acute care volunteers needed

JENN WATT

Editor

For many years, volunteers were recruited for friendly visiting in longterm care, but up until now there wasn't anything similar for acute care.

Haliburton Highlands Health Services along with the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary is organizing a new crew of volunteers to commit to short visits doing the simple things that can make someone's day much better.

It could be bringing someone a newspaper, reading to them, refilling their water or helping them participate in programming.

"We're in the process of getting it going," said Jacqui Clarkson, president of the auxiliary. "We're inding as more and more people are retiring here, more and more people are looking for avenues in how they can use their energies and their interests.'

She hopes some - 10 to 15 of them – will be interested in giving a couple hours here and there to help out.

Brigitte Gebauer, volunteer co-ordinator for Community Support Services at HHHS, said currently there are no activities happening in acute care, which can make afternoons boring for some. Having volunteers there to bring some cheer would do a world of good. They can also bring the patients into Highland Wood long-term care home to participate in their programming.

Volunteers would be needed afternoons from 1 to 3 p.m. and two evenings a week, Mondays and Thursdays, which are movie and bingo nights. Afternoons can be the hardest to get through, Clarkson and Gebauer said. Mornings typically include bathing, breakfast and lunch as well as any therapy that needs to be done. Afternoons, however, typically have less

This new volunteer opportunity is also good for young people considering a career in medicine. Volunteering will allow them to see what it's like behind

In the future, Clarkson would also like to see volunteers working in the emergency department, helping patients in the waiting room by providing a friendly face and answers to common questions, like where the cafeteria is.

Volunteers for acute care need to go through the same process that other HHHS volunteers do, which includes orientation, a police check and a health review, which includes a TB test and checking that vaccinations are up to date.

Clarkson is an active volunteer already, through the auxiliary and with the Grandmothers to Grandmothers organization, and she said what motivates her is the positive feedback loop that is created when you do something nice for someone

"They were happy and I'm happy because they're happy. There's a lot to be said about that," she said.

Gebauer confirmed that research backs up that observation.

"Anytime you go out and do volunteer work you're in a better frame of mind," she said.

For more information about this new volunteer opportunity, contact Brigitte Gebauer at 705-457-1392 extension 2927 or email volunteering@hhhs.ca.

Drop-in basketball continues at HHSS

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Starting this week in Haliburton, the Drop-in Basketball for youth (from 11 to 18) will provide an opportunity for players to build their skills by learning the fundamentals and advance their knowledge of the game.

Gord Cochrane, a retired lawyer and a coach for the local high school, leads this twice-a-week offering, with Andy Valickis every Wednesday and Friday from 5 p.m.

Drop-in basketball includes scrimmages of one-on-one, two-on-two and five-on-five

Cochrane was a collegiate standout basketball player in the U.S. and, most recently, has been a regular coaching staff member for the Red Hawks basketball program, either as an assistant or head coach the past several years. Last year, Valickis was an assistant coach for the Red Cochrane started the instructional basketball coaching himself at the nearby outdoor basketball court.

A few years after he met with Dysart et al and they partnered with Trillium Lakelands District School Board to have the basketball coaching be offered indoors at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School located on Cty Road 21 and Cty Road 1. The township covers the gym cost and pays for insurance.

Dysart recreation co-ordinator Andrea Mueller said virtually all of the feedback from past participants has been positive. There have been repeat participants, some up to three years. The indoor offering started in 2015.

She pointed out the best part of this offering is that it works with summer schedules.

"If you miss a few that's fine. People go away in the summer, but if they're looking for a way to have recreational and physical activity ... this program can [enable participants to] work on skills and get that physical activity. And they're learning from people that know the sport

Students build dry stone bench

JENN WATT

Editor

It's 10:30 a.m. on a Thursday afternoon. It's already 27°C and the breeze is hardly rustling the leaves on the trees around the site of what will be a dry stone bench in Sam Slick Park.

Students in John Shaw-Rimmington's one-week class are sporting circles of sweat on their T-shirts, stopping at regular intervals to chug water and cool off.

They've got the boat bottom and two bench seats in, the bow has been placed and is pointing toward the water, as though with a gentle nudge the rock boat might just float out into Head Lake.

As the students lift the heavy rocks onto the gunwales, there are issues. Even with smaller shards tucked into the crevices, it's not sitting snugly

Shaw-Rimmington tells them to start that layer over.

There are 12 students in this class, offered through Haliburton School of Art + Design. Among them, an accountant, teacher, mason, homemaker and retirees. Two women are in this class, but Shaw-Rimmington said that's an unusually low number. Typically about 50 per cent of his students are woman.

Dry stone means the structure is built crete, mortar or rebar.

'We've been indoctrinated to think that you have to have concrete or something to hold [stone] together," Shaw-Rimmington said during a talk at the college on Wednesday.

"I'm a recovering mason. I used to use mortar, but I've ascended - I've transcended – into that airy space where you just use stone."

Last year's class made the dry stone bridge over the creek in the same park, which is across from the high school on County Road 21. This year's bench is supported by the cultural resources committee of the Municipality of Dysart.

Shaw-Rimmington constructs about one dry stone bridge a year and the rest of the time focuses on other projects, mostly walls or other features.

Benches aren't his favourite project, which could be why this one resembles a Dry stone benches "look like they were built for elephants to sit on," he said. His talk on July 4 was all about the 14 bridges he's constructed so far.

"If you like stone at all, I think probably one of the best things that one can do with stone is use stone alone and use stone to do something which is quite magical, which is suspend stone over a large area, preferably a creek," he said.

The beauty of stone bridges became structed a dry stone wall at the Highland Games in Uxbridge. He had two days to complete the task with 10 tons of stone. He was done the wall in the first day and was feeling disappointed that visitors to the event weren't very interested in the work he was doing.

So he put a hole in the wall and made it into a small arch.

"That got people's attention," he said, joking that the crowd likely expected the arch to come tumbling down when the garbage drum used as a support was

But it didn't fall down. In fact, it kept its shape and kept the audience's attention as

Since then he's built bridges all over Ontario, frequently using the construction as a teaching opportunity

Stone bridges have a humble history, with peasants building them out of necessity to get wool to market. In that spirit, Shaw-Rimmington said he tries to take the mystery out of their creation.

In order to create the arch itself, a wooden bridge form is created, which he calls a "lobster trap."

The stones arranged overtop are called voussoirs, he explained.

Once the stones are in place, the form is removed and the stones remain.

His bridges have included ones with double arches, single arches and one that was wheelchair accessible.

Almost any kind of stone works, as long as it won't crumble.

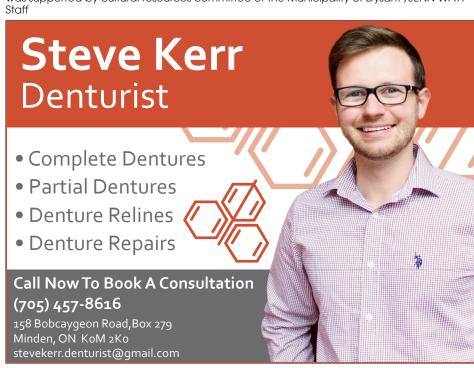

The bench in Haliburton is now complete and ready for the public to enjoy. You can find it sitting along the shore, waiting for its captain.

Students in John Shaw-Rimmington's dry stone class move a particularly heavy rock into place on Thursday morning. They constructed a bench, which looked like a boat, sitting along the shore of Head Lake in Haliburton.

Students work to fit rocks into place on the dry stone bench in Sam Slick Park. The project was supported by cultural resources committee of the Municipality of Dysart. /JENN WATT Staff Event namesake Katie Woudstra, left, thanks participants and volunteers for making the 7th annual Katie's Run a success. The event has grown tremendously over the years and now includes hundreds of participants. This year organizers were hoping to raise $40,000 for epilepsy research. Woudstra has been dealing with epilepsy for the past seven years.

Support for Katie's Run

Olympic gold medalist Alex Kopacz was on hand to lend his support to Katie's Run on July 7. The olympian recently won a medal competing in Pyeongchang in the two-man bobsled event. A native of London, ON, this marked Kopacz's first visit to the Highlands. ANGELICA INGRAM

Athletics: Jordan Amos (Gr. 4), Thomas Nelson (Gr. 5), Dakota DeSousa (Gr. 6) and Riley Boermans (Gr. 7).

Congratulations to these students.

Presenting various awards in addition to Principal Fournier and Highlands East Mayor Burton and very much part of the program were staff members Ms. Davies (vice-principal) Mr.Findein, Ms.Colliver, Ms.Harrison, Ms.Bain and Ms. Thompson.

Awards for the special Grade 8 Cooking Class were presented to two of the volunteer "cooks" Carol Greenwood and Gail Gotter.

An interesting Powerpoint presentation reviewing the school year was made by Abagale Ervin, Ashala Fitzgibbon, Gracyn Whitehead and Cheyenne Fitzgibbon. Refreshments were served after the ceremonies.

Best wishes for a restful pleasant vacation after a busy year of learning and studying together.

Turboprop Revs Up Haliburton Museum

Ernesto Cervini's jazz band, Turboprop, entertained an enthusiastic packed house on Saturday night. It was the sixth annual Jazz at the Museum concert presented by Canoe FM's Jazz at the 45th. Cervini is a rare combination of a fine iazz drummer, band leader and gifted arranger and leads a band comprised of six of Canada's top jazz musicians on the scene today: Tara Davidson on alto saxophone; Kelly Jefferson on tenor saxophone; William Carn on trombone; Adrean Farrugia on piano; Jim Vivian on bass; and Cervini on drums. Turboprop did two sets of music, interspersing modern arrangements of jazz standards with their own fine compositions. There was plenty of tight ensemble playing as well as some excellent solo work. The front line of two saxes and trombone provided excitement while the piano, bass and drums laid down a nice groove. /HUW MORGAN Special to the Echo

The Healthy Lakes Contest

More than $5,000 in prizes to be won - including $1,000 cash!

Septics: The Basics

Septic systems are the number one polluter of our lakes and rivers.

The more efficiently your Septic System operates, the less pollution goes into the environment.

The 2 secrets to Septic Health and minimizing lake pollution are: Bacteria and Time

Bacteria –Never let anything go down the drain that kills the good bacteria in your system – your system need these bacteria to digest the waste before the water goes back into our water table

Time - Your system needs as much time as you can give it to digest the waste you put in before the next load of water arrives. Remember – one drop in = one drop out of your system.

Give your system time by Minimizing Water Use and Spreading It out over Time.

EVERYONE'S TALKING ABOUT SHORELINES

Don't be the neighbour without a natural shoreline buffer. Plants like nutrients and septic systems release nutrients. Plants will take up available nutrients, keeping them from your lake and leaving it healthier and more vibrant.

Pay attention to this tip to answer next week's question!

Shorelines: The Basics

Without a liver your body would not be able to filter toxins and would die. A Natural shoreline is your lake's liver.

Maintaining and re naturalizing our lake shorelines is one of the 2 most important actions that we can take to protect our lakes. Natural shorelines filter out nutrients such as phosphorous before they get into our lakes and cause algae blooms, weed growth and decreased fish populations. They also reduce erosion and flooding and increase habitat for beautiful creatures such as butterflies, birds, fish and frogs.

90% of life in your lake depends on a Natural shoreline with deep rooted native trees and shrubs.

If 75% of your lake's shoreline is not natural your lake is headed for trouble.

GIVE LIFE

All of the life you love in the lake – loons, frogs, fish, etc. - need a native shoreline to survive. Ninety per cent of the living things in your lake survive because of a natural shoreline. Choose life for your lake.

Pay attention to this tip to answer next week's question!

This Week's Prizes Are:

Two $50 gift certificates to Haliburton Timber Mart

PLUS $25 gift card from Northern Expressions, $25 gift card from Lockside Trading, one-year supply of EcoEthic septic treatment, a gift card for PJs from Country Pickin's and barbecue paddles from Walkers Home Hardware Haliburton

The Healthy Lakes Contest brought to you by:

This Week's Question:

My septic system is working fine – so I don't need to get it pumped – right?

How to Win:

Email your answer to this week's question by 5 p.m. Monday, July 16 to chacontest@canoefm.com. The draw will happen on Friday, July 20 at 4:30 p.m. and the winner will be announced live on air on 100.9 Canoe FM and in this space next week. (Only correct answers will be entered in the draw).

Play Each Week!

All qualifying ballots will be entered in a grand prize draw of $1,000 cash to be held Friday, Sept 7, 2018!

Congratulations!

Haliburton Market offers hub for vendors

SUE TIFFIN

Staff Reporter

The former Sears Haliburton building on Hwy 118 is opening its doors again.

The building, which sits on the property where former Sears Haliburton owners Adrian and Wendy Vargas launched Mega Munch Breakfast and Lunch this past May, will re-open on July 14 as Haliburton Market, a flea market with about 18 booths inside and options for sale tables outside.

"We've been pretty busy, non-stop, since we've opened," said Vargas of the popular food truck his family operates. "So much local support since we've opened, which is so reassuring. Repeat customers, we have people two to three times a day, which is awesome."

The truck, which serves up specialties like homemade empanadas, burgers and churros is now open seven days a week, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"I will not name names," he laughed. "I've told people I won't name them, but yes, they are here three times

Mega Munch Breakfast and Lunch was getting so much traffic, that the Vargas family brainstormed what could fill the space of the otherwise empty ground level of the Sears building. That's when the idea of a flea market came to mind.

"[We said] let's put this on Facebook and see what happens, and it just went viral," said Vargas. "So many good responses, and everyone wanted to get in there."

The Vargas family partnered with Rita McCarty, a long-time friend who Adrian said is a "go-getter", to manage the market. McCarty has experience organizing similar types of community sales in England, and is enthusiastic about the plan, which she said has been coming together quickly.

"Adrian said, what if we use this space as a flea mar-ket, and give people the opportunity in good weather and bad to pass along their treasures to someone else," said McCarty. "We went, OK, let's do it. And this was a week and a half ago."

The indoor and outdoor market will be air-conditioned and feature about 18 generous booth spaces indoors that each have electricity, which McCarty said would be beneficial if, for example, a realtor wanted to show their videos on a loop. Outside, garage sales could be held. The parking lot has ample space for visitors.

"We have so many talented people in this community, it's a shame for them to not be able to share their beautiful products," said McCarty. "They don't always have an outlet to do that.

Vendors will be able to set up on Friday evenings if they want, and those with heavy products, like antique furniture or wood carvings, will be able to keep their booths set up if they plan on being vendors each week, rather than lugging their merchandise around.

"It's a place that we can all get together, and all earn a little bit of money," said McCarty. "Whether it's someone who wants to sell their crafts, or someone who wants to clear out their junk, because as we all know, one man's trash is another man's treasure."

Five dollars from every vendor fee will be donated to the local Food For Kids program, which the Vargas family has supported for years. That means if a vendor signs up for 10 weeks, the Food for Kids program would benefit with a $50 donation. Vendors can book for the day, weekend, or season.

Additionally, the market has space on the walls for advertising, so that guests to the market will be able to see what else is available in the area, whether it be an event or a business.

The Haliburton Market plans to open until the Christmas season, offering shoppers the chance to buy locally. "Everybody talks about shopping locally," said Vargas. "We want to give a place to advertise your local things that you make locally. It's all about the community. We're very big on the community, we've always said that."

In the future, Vargas also has plans to potentially bring an ice cream truck onto the site. A flower market currently also runs on the property.

"Hopefully this becomes a hub," said Vargas.

Haliburton Market celebrates a grand opening on July 14 at 13533 Highway 118 in Haliburton. Follow Haliburton Market on Facebook for updates.

It's all about the community. We're very big on the community, we've always said that.

650 OBITUARIES

On July 1, 2018 Donald Edward Storey passed away at age 76.

He leaves behind Gayle, a loving wife of 54 years, a son Brent (Cathy), a daughter Holly and two grandchildren Matthew and Richele.

Don was born February 16, 1942 in Highland Grove, Ontario. He was raised on the family farm and is predeceased by his father Roy, mother Edith and brothers Gordon, Ivan, Bud and Joe. He leaves behind a sister Doreen (Ralph), brother Eric (Helen) and many cousins and friends.

It was in Highland Grove where Don met and married Gayle in October of 1963 and soon started their family. Don and Gayle loved Harcourt and have many fond memories of hunting, dances, fishing and enjoying the beautiful lakes and of course spending time with great family and friends.

In 1976 they moved the family out west to Wetaskiwin, Alberta where they started a siding business "Storey Exteriors".

In 2001 Don and Gayle moved to Buck Lake where they returned to the quiet country life they loved and missed. Don and Gayle lovingly made the acreage their home where they loved to entertain family and friends. Don had a talent for woodworking and could often be found in his shop building.

After retirement Don and Gayle took to spending winters in Arizona but when traveling to the States was no longer an option they happily travelled "home" to Harcourt and Dark Lake spending their summers rekindling their friendship with family and friends.

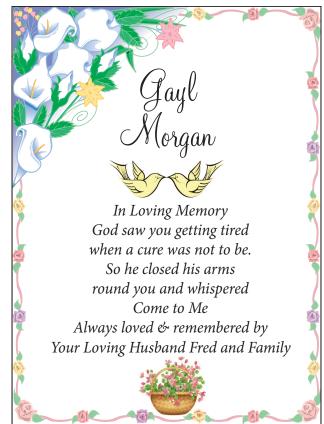

As per Don's request no service will be held.

Board to build new school

VSS students will have own home in fall 1997

by PETER DOWNS Staff Reporter

Victoria Street School students Victoria Street School students will have a brand new school to just for primarily level students. go to when theirs is closed down

The Haliburton County Board of Education has decided to build a separate school to replace VSS rather than making room for its students at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School with an addition. Board members plan to have the new school, which will be located somewhere on the grounds surrounding JDHES, open for classes in September

1997, immediately after VSS has been abandoned. "Parents of Victoria Street students have said they feel a separate school would be safer (than creating a larger school at JDHES)," said Dysart trustee Len Salvatori. "We have to start listening to the community. And what the community wants, we of such a school would be about should be doing.

Since the board decided in May to close down 70-year-old parents have been lobby-

They have argued the "atmosphere" of a small, independent school would be lost at a larger school for students from Kindergarten to Grade 8.

Two weeks ago they asked the board to build a 12-room school with its own principal for students from Junior Kindergarten to Grade 3, including a library, activity room and a staff room with a full kitchen.

Tuesday night they got their wish when trustees voted 11-3 in favour of the plan. Anson, Hindon and Minden trustees Bryan Kernohan and Wally Bunn, as well as Glamorgan trustee Craig Pettit, did not support the motion.

Five forest fires - including two unextinguished camp fires and one caused by Canada Day fireworks - kept local Ministry of Natural Resources crews busy Sunday.

A fire near the Leslie Frost Centre in Dorset, started by lightning, was still burning as of yesterday as were two others in the Bancroft area near fishing takes. The Dorset-area blaze destroyed about 1.5 hectares of hardwood and mixed wood for-

MNR officials are also investigating a .1 hectare blaze in Somerville which was apparently started by children "playing with fire," said MNR Fire Technician Ron McKenzie.

Two of the five blazes were accessible only by helicopter and two others were put out by area fire departments

While all of the fires were relatively small, "it's been so long since we've had substantial rain, these fires go down deep into the forest's floor. Putting them out is very time-consuming,' McKenzie said.

Numerous residents and recreationalists face charges or were issued warnings for violating bans on both brush burnings and

The MNR will decide today whether or not to extend the ban on camp fires and no fire permits will be issued until there is a substantial rainfall, he said.

Jessica Bain strains against the rope as she leads her fellow participants in the Tug of War at West Guiford's ♥ Canada Day ♥ celebrations. There were dozens of children's games organized by the hard-working recreation committee, and every child received a ribbon and candy prize. Saturday dawned dark and cool, but by the time the festivities began at noon, the sun was shining. It's never rained on West Guilford's party, which is one of the most popular way to celebrate Canada's birthday in the Highlands. For story and photos, please see page 22.
